TO PREPARE ALIENS FOR NATURALIZATION

Public Evening Schools, Re-opening Monday, to Offer Training

One of the most important features of the Philadelphia public evening schools, which will reopen next Monday, will be the special effort to give the foreign-born population of the city the opportunity to take a course to aid in their naturalization.

Not only will classes be conducted in all of the common school branches, including English for foreigners, but arrangements have also been made to place in the hands of the teachers necessary blanks for first and second citizenship papers.

The Government will give free to each alien candidate for citizenship attending the night schools a copy of the "Student's Textbook," prepared by the Bureau of Naturalization.

The schools, in which classes will be held on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays at 7:30 p. m., are as follows: Miller, Forty-third and Gaden streets.
